Organisations and employers recognise the positive impact of having people who are committed to continuously developing their skills and updating their knowledge. There is also a growing pressure to ensure that they know that people are competent in the roles they are performing.

Many organisations opt OUT of introducing competence assessment and CPD systems because of:

X Complexity

X Cost against benefits

This competency based assessment system is already being used by a number of organisations.

Kenneth Aitchison
from the Institute of Field Archaeologists comments:

"By introducing an electronic system we have enabled our members for the first time to easily capture evidence of their competence and set it against the relevant occupational standards.

This evidence will then be more easily assessed by experts within the relevant field because they will be able to access it remotely wherever they are.."

Axia Interactive Media have created NOW.net, an on-line platform that streamlines the way that competence is developed and assessed. It contains an imaginative combination of interactive diagnostics (that support individuals to identify their strengths and the gaps in their knowledge) and includes e-Portfolio (in which evidence of someone's competence can be captured and cross referenced against any standards). Learning materials are also built-in.

It is already fully developed and can be easily tailored to work with any business, any industry anywhere in the world.

Organisations as diverse as the Royal College of Nursing and the Council for Administration are already using the system.

It can be simple or complex as the organisation requires.

Components can be turned on and off and those that are turned on can be customised to meet specific needs.

The process of assessment has been simplified and streamlined without sacrificing quality.

Resources required to operate a competency based assessment system have been drastically reduced.

A system can be introduced quickly because no development is required.

Organisations can focus on getting the assessment process right knowing the technology is fit for purpose.

It is competitively priced; organisations of whatever size can afford to enjoy the benefits of this platform.
